

AMERICAN LEGISLATIVE EXCHANGE COUNCIL
ALEC

The Honorable Nancy Pelosi
United States House of Representatives

Dear Senator Reid and Speaker Pelosi:

We are writing to reiterate our concern with recent federal health reform efforts—particularly, the Medicare-modeled “public plan” and a national health insurance exchange—which we believe would trample states’ rights and lead Americans down the road to single-payer health care.

The American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC) represents more than 1,800 state legislative members. ALEC is the nation’s largest nonpartisan, individual membership association of state legislators. Approximately one-third of all state legislators belong to ALEC, in addition to 78 ALEC “alumni” in Congress and more than 300 private-sector companies, national trade associations, and nonprofit organizations. The 167 undersigned members from 41 states are state legislators who chose to take an additional individual stand against the public plan and national health insurance exchange.

In May, ALEC’s lawmakers approved the Resolution on Preserving States’ Rights Regarding Federal Health Insurance Exchanges and a Public Plan (attached), which deems the public plan anti-competitive and invokes the Tenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in calling the national health insurance exchange a “federal takeover” of the states’ role in regulating health insurance.

As a representative to such a broad coalition of state interests, ALEC questions the wisdom and practicality of the public plan and the national health insurance exchange. Our concerns include:

* The public plan will not be competitive. It’s an unlevel playing field when the public plan can shift costs to our states’ private insurers because of low doctor and hospital reimbursement rates, and then raid the federal treasury for unlimited subsidies. Government will only compete when it can change the rules to win. To have government serve simultaneously as a regulator and a competitor defies common sense.

* The national health insurance exchange represents a federal takeover of the states’ role in regulating health insurance. States are the primary regulators of the health insurance market today. They provide aggressive oversight of all aspects of the market and ensure a local, responsive presence for consumers. A national health insurance exchange would shift decision-making to Washington and undermine states’ oversight role in health care.

* The national health insurance exchange would lead to a “Robin Hood in reverse” funding scheme in which states with lower health care costs subsidize states with higher costs. Health care costs vary considerably among states. If the national health insurance exchange leads to creating a regional or national pool, low-cost states would subsidize high-cost states. While this may be a good deal for a high-cost state, low-cost states would end up paying more for health insurance premiums.

* The public plan and national health insurance exchange will lead to single-payer health care. Political pressure to keep public plan premiums low and benefits high will result in the “crowding out” of private sector insurance alternatives. The Lewin Group estimates that nearly 119 million Americans will drop private coverage and enroll in the government plan. This represents a 60% reduction in the number of Americans with private health insurance—not to mention a significant drop in much-needed state premium tax revenue.

We all share the goal that patients deserve to choose their own quality, affordable, private health coverage. But health reform shouldn’t just be the job of the federal government. These goals are being advanced—and achieved—by state legislators nationwide. ALEC is a national leader in promoting many patient-centered health reforms at the state level, including:

* The Freedom of Choice in Health Care Act, introduced by seven states this session, which preserves patient rights to make health coverage decisions in the state constitution.

* The Health Care Choice Act for States, introduced by 10 states this session, which allows patients to purchase quality, affordable health coverage across state lines.

* The Affordable Health Insurance Act, enacted in Georgia last session, which provides state tax breaks to individuals, businesses, and insurers who buy and sell high-deductible health plans.

* The Mandated Benefits Review Act, enacted in 29 states, which provides an institutional check on costly health insurance mandates that keep people uninsured.

We wanted to thank you for taking the time to read this letter. Again, ALEC is troubled by the public plan and national health insurance exchange, which we believe will trample states’ rights and lead Americans down the road to single-payer health care. Our health policy staff welcomes the chance to work with you on developing patient-centered, free-market reforms—and we look forward to sharing with you the stories of ALEC’s state legislators who are advancing and achieving these goals every day.
